Notes Accidentally Bumped Against an Italian, Who Re-sented It by Severing His Jugular Vein—A Man Arrested

James Niles, of Louisiana avenue and Vienna street, East New York, is in a critical condition in Bradford Street Hospital, Brooklyn, to-day with his throat cut, having been attacked by a mysterious Italian whom he did not know.

Coming from Evergreens Cemetery yesterday with a friend, Niles passed an Italian at New Lots road and Pennsylvania avenue. Accidentally Niles brushed the Italian as he walked past. He thought nothing of the incident and went on his way.

When Niles returned to his home at 100 West 12th street, he was informed that his wife had been attacked and killed. He rushed to the scene and found the body of his wife lying on the ground. He called the police and they arrested a man who was seen running away from the scene.

The man was taken to the hospital and his wounds were treated. He is now in a critical condition.

FIRE DAMAGES FINE PICTURES

Small Blaze at Brooklyn Institute of Art and Sciences at Eastern Parkway—Many Paintings Hurt by Smoke.

Care examination was made to-day of the valuable paintings in the Brooklyn Institute of Art and Sciences, at Eastern Parkway and Washington avenue, damaged by smoke from a small fire which occurred in the building last night. It was impossible to determine immediately after the fire the extent of the damage.

The central section of the museum is now being completed, and the fire started, supposedly from spontaneous combustion, in a large pile of rugs and tapestries. The fire spread to the paintings, which were saved by the quick action of the fire department. The damage to the paintings is not serious, but the smoke has done considerable harm to the collection.

NEW YORKERS A GOOD-NATURED BUNCH, SAYS COWBOY EDITOR

Bonham, of Deadwood, Impressed by Our Subway and Our Beautiful Women, but Says the West Would Never Stand for Our Street-Car Hogs.

Editor W. H. Bonham, of the Deadwood Times-Pioneer, has seen New York as a member of Seth Bullock's "hunch" and with some difficulty he was induced to tell an Evening World reporter his impressions of the city.

"Being of a mechanical bent, and having travelled extensively in the West," Mr. Bonham began, "I am free to confess that the thing that interests me most in your city is its underground work. I have read much and seen many pictures of the subway, but they do not begin to do it justice. Its construction is so wonderful, and all is so light, clean and airy. Without exception it is the finest roadbed I ever saw, and the clocklike regularity with which everything moves is amazing. It would be impossible outside of New York. The trains run so smoothly the express trains glide by almost like a procession of ghosts."

"I have read that De Lesseps counted the curve of the elevated road at One Hundred and Tenth street one of the finest pieces of civil engineering in the world. The curve of the subway at Times Square seems to me to be even more remarkable. The grading of the express tracks there is no precise and perfect that I believe a train could round the curve at full speed without jumping the track."

"The man who built the subway is a genius, but—here a fascinating twinkle came into Mr. Bonham's eyes—"you had to go west to find the right man to run it, didn't you? As for those advertisements over which there's been such a rumour—well, you know I'm a newspaper publisher. Next to the subway I think the most impressive thing to a Westerner about New York is its women. The city is a veritable show garden for beautiful women. They are beautiful

HOW CITY IMPRESSED COWBOY EDITOR.

The Subway has the finest roadbed I ever saw and express trains glide by so smoothly they are like a procession of ghosts.

The city is a veritable show garden for beautiful women. And the women have wit as well as beauty.

New York is not extravagant, considering the wealth of its people. With all its grandeur and impressive vastness, the city might have spared a little more breadth for streets.

Good nature seems written all over the faces of a New York crowd, whether it be on Broadway or in the Bowery.

There's one thing we Westerners would never tolerate, and that is the way New York men allow women to stand while they seize the seats.

is as effective as the Street-Cleaning Department. If there is 'graff' in it, I feel certain that some one other than the men themselves was originally re-responsible. I have not as yet had an opportunity to observe the efficiency of your fire department and I hope I shall not at least not at close range. That's one of the things I am always ready to take another man's word for.

"Good nature seems to be written all over the faces of a New York crowd, whether it be on Broadway or in the Bowery. Externally at least the crowd seems to take its troubles lightly, and in that respect the West would do well to sit up and take notice. As Mac-Queste dubbed your street-car straps, the minute he entered a car, with men squeezing him on four sides and another treading on his chosen corn, a New Yorker seems capable of smiling and laughing. Sometimes I wonder, though, whether it's good nature or philosophy."

"But there's one thing we Westerners would never tolerate, and that is the way New York men allow women to stand in the cars while they seize the seats. I suppose it's because woman has entered into such an extent of man's business life that he comes to look upon her nearly as a man. Our Western men keep business more to themselves, and a plain girl has a seat offered to her just as quickly as a pretty one."

"Before I leave I intend to look deeply into shipping affairs. We have nothing like that out on the plains, and the harbor is a most fascinating sight. In fact, all New York is fascinating, and I guess Ed Cessa was about right when he said to me just before he left with the boys, Bonham, if I couldn't live in Deadwood, I'd want to live in New York."

Crusade Against High Prices.

145 JAMES BUTLER Grocery Stores Are Daily Mowing High Prices Down.

A great host of delighted housekeepers are daily and hourly reaping the fruits of our victories. Last week's sudden onslaught of the fresh egg army played havoc with the high prices and completely demoralized them. To sell 13 strictly fresh eggs for 25c at this season is a great economical victory—bringing joy to several hundred thousand families. Such a victory repays us for the labor and losses we sustained in our fight for the downfall of extortionate prices. From now on the fresh egg army will keep busy and miss no opportunity to strike the enemy hard. While a few of the outposts may suffer minor defeats, we have the situation so well in hand that we feel safe in predicting that the progress of the main body of the fresh egg army will be a triumphal march from one great victory to another.

Very Best Creamery Butter, a lb., 25c

We commenced our crusade some weeks ago against the price of butter, which was getting out of all bounds, and we planned for a big smash. Great secrecy was necessary to success. Our secret agents have been quietly at work through the dairy districts of Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois, Southern Ohio and New York, picking up here and there the best creamery butter in sight, and making contracts months ahead where the quality proved extra. Every pound is fresh, rich and delicious. The first ten carloads arrived Saturday morning. Despite all our safeguards, news of its coming leaked out among the dealers about the middle of last week. Then there was a hot scramble to unload their present stocks of storage butter before the "real thing" arrived, and retail prices were sent tumbling in a wild panic to get out from under before the week ended. Our purpose was accomplished.

This Fresh-Butter Crusade will be kept up by us with unflinching zeal. Our customers will always have the best of it in quality and price.

The present sale will continue until the ten carloads are disposed of. That will be in short order, for the quality is superlative. Better be on hand early this week and get your share of this first shipment.
